BRITAIN BETRAYED

As Labour Conceals Immigration Figures

Editorial

Autumn 1998

Clinton's Hypocrisy

Most politicians are practised hypocrites and the more powerful they are, the more hypocritical they become.

This years award of "Hypocrite of the Year" must go to the US President, Bill Clinton, for his fine performance in pretending to sympathise with the victims of the massacre in Omagh, combined with his condemnation of the bombers, when for the past few years he has not only allowed republican scum to raise the money in the United States to purchase the implements of murder but has given marxist republicans a cloak of acceptance by inviting their representatives to the White House.

Stand up for your award, Bill Clinton. Hypocrite of the Year and accessory to murder.

Runner-Up Award

The runner-up in the "Hypocrite of the Year award must go to Irish Prime Minister, Bertie Ahern.

Bertie made the appropriate commiserations over the Omagh massacre, and promised to do all he could to fight terrorism in Ireland but, just a few days prior to the bombing, Bertie took an active part in the campaign to get bail for 21year old Elaine Moore, who is awaiting trial in London with three companions on charges of conspiring to cause explosions and possessing explosives.

Mr Ahern publicly welcomed the decision to give bail to Moore.

Bad Timing

The new, Criminal Justice (Terrorism & Conspiracy) Bill passed with almost obscene speed by Parliament, allows for the conviction of an alleged terrorist solely on the word of a senior police officer.

How unfortunate that almost simultaneously, Sussex police admitted that several of their officers, including some senior ones, were being investigated for corruption.

Also, did you notice that part of the new anti-terrorist legislation introduced in the aftermath of the Omagh bombing included several clauses relating to the planning of terrorist activities in Britain, which were intended to be implemented abroad?

Much has been written about the alleged activities of anti-Zionist Arabs who have temporary refuge in Britain and are often accused of plotting activities relating to the armed struggle in Palestine.

We wonder could they be the intended targets of these clauses and who suggested this addition to the new legislation?

Answers on a postcard to the Board of Deputies.

Congratulations

Our congratulations go to two veterans of the Nationalist struggle in Britain. Firstly, to Mr Colin Jordan who refuses to be bullied by the political "thought police" and their faceless masters. Mr Jordan is again embroiled in a struggle against those seeking to interfere with his rights of free speech.

Our congratulations also go to Robert Relf, who following many years of political activity which has earned him at least two terms of imprisonment has now decided to demonstrate his continuing fitness and determination by attempting a bungee jump from the world's highest venue in Switzerland.

Mr Jordan is seventy-five years old and Bob Relf is seventy-three.

What fine examples these two men are to the youth of today.

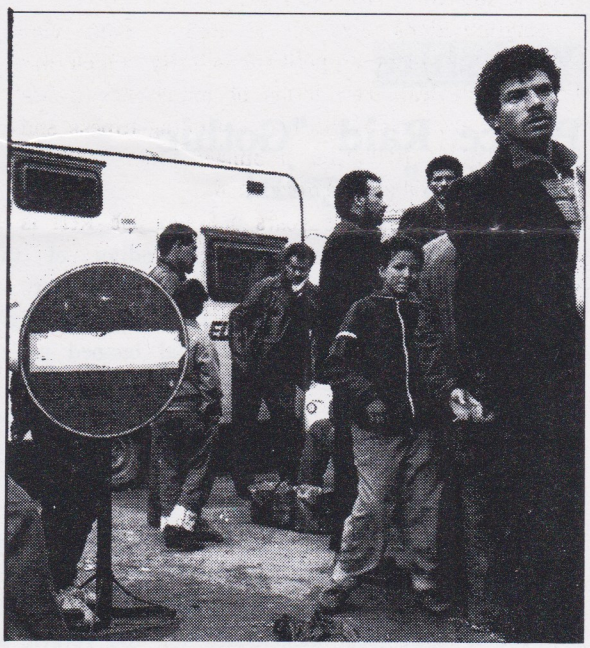

Our heartiest congratulations to the both of you.

Labour Hide True Figures On Refugees

As hundreds of Asylum seekers and economic refugees pour into Britain every week, the Labour government is deliberately hiding the true figures from the British public.

The size of the influx is so great that the Government fears adverse public reaction if the true figures are revealed. At the port of Dover alone, seventy ayslum-seekers from Eastern Europe have arrived in just one day! All the immigrants were male and were found hidden in lorries arriving from the continent
Immgration officers have turned back over 2000 economic refugees at the Channel Tunnel in the past eight months but despite their efforts, in the latter part of last year over 700 gypsies arrived at Dover and Ashford in just one week.

Asylum Seekers or Economic Refugees? All Will Be Made Welcome By New Labour.

A total of 4,212, refugees arrived in Britian in July of this year and another 850 arrived at Heathrow airport in August. The record for Heathrow was 105 in one day. These were destined to join the 74,000 currently waiting for a decision on their asylum request.
But the Government, fearful of inciting a hostile response from the British public who are not aware of the scale of the problem, simply disguised the true figures by immediately granting most Asylum seekers temporary admission to Britain, thus taking them off the waiting list!
The financial cost to Britain of this subterfuge is tremendous. The Home Office spent in excess of FIVE HUNDRED MILLION POUNDS last year just to pay for the housing, feeding and clothing of asylum-seekers. This year's bill is expected to be far higher!
New labour's promise to toughen-up immigration laws have, like so many of New Labour's promises, turned out to be a lie. Whilst it is true that over 50, 000 refugees have had their appeals for asylum rejected since Labour came into power, 40, 000 have still not left the country and another 17,000 absconded before being served with deportation orders and have vanished.
It has been estimated that of the 23,000 economic refugees who are waiting for the result of legal appeals against being refused residence, 9000 will simply vanish before being deported.
The record total for refugees entering Britain illegally was 44,000 in 1995. This year we have already had 32,500 applications and Immigration officers are convinced that by the end of the year the figures will exceed those of 1995.
It must also be remembered that these figures only reflect the total number of refugees that have sought asylum. Tens of thousands of others have simply vanished into our economy.
The Home Office have denied that there are secret plans under consideration to declare an amnesty to those living illegally in Britain, but have admitted that if they are to achieve their commitment to deport those who have had asylum claims rejected, then they will have to eject over 110,000 bogus refugees by the year 2002, or give them permission to stay in Britain indefinitely!

In their short time in power, New Labour have managed to betray the future of an entire generation of ethnic Britons. And their treachery continues!

"Justice For Whites" Demanded After Racial Attack Case Is Dropped.

The Crown Prosecution service was condemned as "racially motivated" after they decided recently not to proceed with charges against eight Asian youths accused of violently attacking a White teenager in the Isle of Dogs area of East London.

The Asian youths were arrested after attacking 14 year old White youth, Paul Sammut as he walked home with two girls. Such was the viciousness of the attack that Paul was left with his finger almost severed as he tried to ward of a rain of blows from a kitchen knife. The Asians then took refuge in an Asian community centre and local police created some controversy by refusing to enter the centre to arrest the thugs, "for fear of inciting racial tension".

The police finally decided to act after Paul's father led a local campaign for justice, during which he himself was arrested. Eight Asian youths were eventually arrested and charged with conspiracy to commit GBH. Superintendent, Derek Driver, of Limehouse Police admitted to being baffled by the CPS's decision not to proceed with the case saying, "We put all the evidence we could muster, and we left no stone unturned, but the CPS have decided not to proceed with the case".

The police officer who originally investigated the attack, Detective Inspector, Ian Delbarre, was surprisingly transferred to a new job at Scotland Yard midway through the case.

Paul's family have vowed to continue their fight for justice. Paul's mother, Gill, said "I will do whatever I've got to do to get justice. We will fight on". An Unnamed member of the family told League Sentinel that one of the options the family are considering is that of a private prosecution conducted on the lines of that taken by the family of Black teenager, Stephen Lawrence. But he said, "We don't expect to get the same amount of help and publicity as they did because Paul is a White victim of racial violence and this is the East End".

Police Raid "Gothic Ripples" Again!

Veteran nationalist, Colin Jordan, editor of the "Gothic Ripples" newsletter and the author of several books, has again been raided by Britain's political police searching for material banned under section 24 of the Public Order Act 1986.

The police acting on a warrant issued following an unspecified complaint by an undisclosed complainant spent four hours ransacking Mr Jordan's Yorkshire home.

As in their previous raid of 1991, the police illegally seized material not connected with the warrant and as a consequence Mr Jordan has lodged a formal application with local magistrates for the return of his property.

In 1991, following a similar raid, Mr Jordan successfully applied for a judicial review of police conduct and was awarded £14,000 in costs and damages.

BNP "Double Whammy" In Local Publicity Campaign

The British National Party are normally associated with activity and support within the major inner-city areas of our country. But their decision to try and establish support in more rural areas by widening their activity certainly seems to have paid off

Peterborough

In the tranquil town of Peterborough, the BNP gained valuable publicity when they announced their decision to form a branch in the town. Predictably, the local press in the shape of the Herald & Post, condemned the decision and launched a phone poll in an attempt to whip up local opinion against the BNP. But the Herald & Post admitted they were totally shocked when their poll revealed that sixty-six percent of the local population polled voted in favour of the BNP establishing a local branch.

The local Labour MP, Helen Brinton, one of Blair's new "bimbo-babes", then, in an attempt to denigrate the BNP, accused them of sending her threats and obscene suggestions through the post. Unfortunately for Brinton, she then admitted that although she had been receiving hate mail purported to have come from the BNP for the past NINE MONTHS, she had just decided to publicise her accusations.

A BNP press officer denied any knowledge of people sending or making threats to Brinton stating to the local press, "We are a non-violent organisation".

The paper quoted extensively the BNP's Regional organiser, John Peacock, and the local press officer, Phil Edwards, without adding their own normally adverse comment.

Unusually, even the local police chief, who are normally instructed to continually condemn the BNP, only explained police policy on the dangers of establishing vigilante type groups.

Congratulations to the BNP for a publicity coup and congratulations to the the Herald & Post and the Newark Advertiser for fair, unbiased, reporting.

EXPOSED: ZIONISM'S BLOOD FEUD

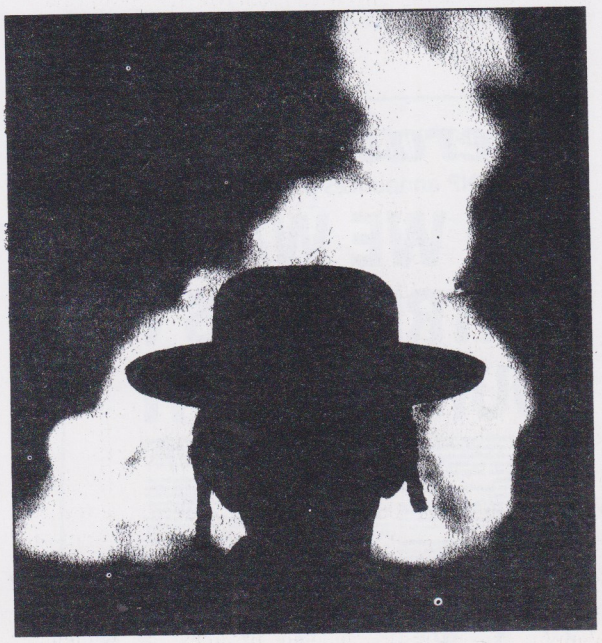

The question of Jewish identity has long been a bone of contention within Jewish communities. The Jews are more divided today over the issues of the religious and secular that the definition of a Jew seems to defy all that is rational or logical. There is no mistaking the almost caricature of the ultra-orthodox Haredi Jews whose lives revolve around the Torah. Their fanatical faith is the extreme expression of Judaism to such a degree that their intolerance is now directed more and more against the non-religious Jew with repercussions for both Israel and the United States.

Former Soviet dissident and now Israel's Minister For Soviet Jews, Nathan Sharansky, recently complained that, "There are too many liberal Jews in the US administration ... more than in any previous US administration". He further claimed, "It is precisely because of the large number of Jews in the administration that the President thinks he can pressurise Israel". Confused? Sharansky is complaining of the preponderance of liberal Jews, those leaning towards an Israeli group called Peace Now. When this outburst reached the ears of Washington, a spokesman for the State Department, James Rubin, was instructed not to respond. But another Jew in the administration was more forthcoming. He evinced, "You may find it incomprehensible, but it is precisely because of the large number of Jews in the US administration ... there are more of them now than in any previous administration ... that it is hard for the President to truly understand the trends in the Jewish community. Why? Because many of these presidential Jews belong to the American branch of Peace Now".

That Jews now control the US administration would first appear advantageous to Zionist aspirations in Israel. From Madeleine Albright to Defence Secretary William Cohen, from head of National Security Sandy Berger to Secretary of Treasury Robert Rubin and Supreme Court appointees, Stephen Bryer and Ruth Ginsberg ... it all seems the fulfilment of Judaic prophesy. Clinton even appointed Rabbi Rahm Emanuel as his policy adviser ... so what is Sharansky complaining about?

The rift between religious messianic Jews and the secular, more liberal, "co-religionists" is at its widest and most potentially cataclysmic since the creation of the Zionist state. The secular Jews make up about 70 per cent of the Israeli population but the Haredim, the ultra-orthodox, have the moral and religious support of Prime Minister Netanyahu, the most hawkish premier since David Ben Gurion. Since 1948, provision had been made to accommodate the religious and secular, with seperate schools and, in the case of the orthodox, exemption from military service when religious studies took precedence. This compromise was an attempt to create some semblance of Jewish unity. Now it is falling apart with talk of civil war on many lips.

The Palestinian problem seems to fade from the international political arena as friction between religious and secular Jews is exacerbated. In fact, the Palestinian issue has highlighted the differing views. Israel signed the Oslo Accord in 1993 agreeing to return 13 per cent of the Palestinians' land but now Netanyahu not only backpedals in order to appease the ultra-orthodox but is now demanding $1 billion from the United States before he will consider abiding by the accord ... a scam he learned from the World Jewish Congress in their dealings with Switzerland! That he has no intention of abiding by the accord is crystal clear as he permits more Jewish settlers onto Palestinian territory. He is as trustworthy on the Palestinian issue as Gerry Adams is on the "peace process" in Northern Ireland. As the escalating friction between ultra-orthodox and liberal secular Jews continues then the Northern Ireland scenario may have more than one parallel. If the Haredim gain more power and influence then they would turn Israel into a fundamentalist theocracy with all the hallmarks of their arrogance and intolerance. The Palestinians would be mere spectators in a real civil war.

ISRAEL: Where Arrogance And Religious Intolerance Fans The Flames Of Hatred.

NIETZSCHE'S GOOD EUROPEAN

The world is waiting for a man, Nietzsche wrote in 1873, who will destroy the habits of thousands of years and replace them with better. Originally, the great man Nietzsche waited for would be the Messianic Hope of Germany. In a preface to a book addressed to Richard Wagner he wrote, "I would like nothing better than to meet a man with whom I could not talk this way, a being of angry greatness, with the bravest eye and the keenest will; at once warrior, poet and philosopher; one whom you could imagine striding over serpents and monsters"

"The hero of the future will be a man of tragic awareness. The light of Grecian joyousness will be on his brow, the glory with which the rebirth of antiquity ... hitherto lingering ... will be inaugerated, the rebirth in Germany of the Hellenic world".

This early espousal of a deeply rooted political philosophy, purely German in character, persuaded many that he was a harbinger of National Socialism and that the Messiah he referred to was Adolf Hitler. As prophesy it was undeveloped, for Nietzsche went beyond even this century as this idea took on broader horizons.

After his break with Wagner he rejected the narrower German nationalism and in his last works he adopted pan-Europeanism and the Great Man is the Good European. This was not an Adolf Hitler but more of an Oswald Mosley transcending the older anachronistic view. Because Europe was becoming one economically and culturally he proposed that it should become one politically ... not a loose federal union but a pan-European force in the world with the power to hold at bay the materialism of money-grabbing American capitalism. This Heroic Vitalism is the philosophy of the aristocratic mind of Europe standing between the Orient which lacks vitality and the United States of America which lacks heroism. Only the Good European can achieve the synthesis.

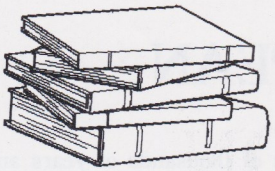

Friedrich Nietzsche.

This Europe was not to be some pacifist bloc but a power capable of mastering the world ... just as the Good European was to be a soldier first. For this purpose Nietzsche proposed a union with Russia and an accommodation with Britain. This was at a time when Britain pursued an imperialist policy detached from European events. He wrote that Britain would crumble within fifty years and the smaller nations of Europe would all be mastered. Within fifty years Britain embarked on a course leading to the Second European War with the consequence that she lost her empire.

There were to be two stages in the development of the Good European. First, there were to be the free-spirits of today, those Europeans born before the age of a united Europe. Then next, those who will inherit the continent after "the age of great wars and great politics" ... not the twentieth century but the twenty first. Nietzsche's philosophy of the new superior man would shock liberals. From Schopenhauer he adopted the dream of a kingdom of higher men, men who would not compromise and who loved adventure and war. All previous ideas were symptoms of decadence and exhaustion over which the heirs of European culture would impose their new order.

In his prophesy the peoples of Europe, after the wars of the twentieth century, would serve a new race of masters which he called "the lords of the earth", the people being a means to an end. And what is this end, what is the purpose? It is purely and simply The Will to Power, the energy of greatness moulding the man of the future. Nietzsche did not propose any system of rigid beliefs ... he had no need of the philosopher's "truth". Their only belief was their own power. The great man was to be indifferent to public opinion. His strength emanates from a lack of conviction. He is too intelligent to be a bigot but uses the intellect for his own greatness.

He is the bridge between good and evil ... he is a Destiny.

BOOK REVIEW

SAVITRI DEVI,

In the introduction to his book, "Hitler's Priestess", Nicholas Goodrick-Clarke alludes to "the powerful impact of one of fascism's most creative minds". In this scholarly biography of Savitri Devi, the author pays an unreserved tribute to a brave and resolute woman whose commitment to National Socialism led her on a life's journey of epic proportions. Since her death in 1982, her prolific works, republished by Ernst Zündel's Samisdat Publishers, provide bridges between ancient mythology, Aryan identity and New Age aesthetics.

Savitri Devi was born in Lyons in 1905 to an English mother and a Greek/Italian father. In her early youth she identified with Greece and the ideals of classical Greek antiquity but her later admiration for Hitler led her to pursue the origins of the Aryan people. In 1932 she journeyed to India, long believed to be the source of our racial origin. Goodrick-Clark, in defence of Savitri Devi, quotes the great pantheon of European thinkers including Voltaire, Kant, Johann Gottfried Herder, Hegel, Jacob Grimm and the brothers Friedrch and August Wilhelm Schlegel, all of them influenced by this interest in the origins of the Aryan tribes in South Asia. On her travels in India she was retracing the path of this belief in the origins of the Aryans or as Julius von Klaproth defined them, the Indo-Germanic.

Savitri Devi
Calcutta, 1939.

Savitri Devi was to embrace Hinduism "as the only living Aryan heritage in the modern world" with its swastika, caste system and the implied eugenics. She deduced that India would be the most receptive to National Socialism. Many Hindu nationalists looked favourably upon Hitler and looked to him to liberate them from British colonial rule, likewise many Muslim nationalists in several Arab states.

Hinduism gave Savitri Devi her occult perspective and it is this aspect of her Weltanschauung which makes her contribution to the lasting National Socialist creed the most significant today. She had discovered the religion of beauty, a love of the natural world and, in opposition to Judeo-Christianity, the importance of the eternal universe of existence, in which "man was only a detail".

In India she met Asit Krishna Mukherji, a Hindu publisher and Brahman. Mukherji was on excellent terms with the German consul, Baron Edwart von Selzam, and published excerpts from Mein Kampf in his journals. Mukherji identified completely with German National Socialism with its pan-Aryanism and the emphasis on strength and beauty. Subsequently, Savitri Devi was so impressed with these parallels that she considered returning to Europe in the late 1930s, with Mukherji exhorting her to "Go back to Europe, where duty calls you ... where there are still Aryans strong and wide-awake; go to him who is truly life and resurrection: the Leader of the Third Reich".

The outbreak of the Second European War left Savitri Devi trapped in India and she was to marry Asit Krishna Mukherji on 9 June 1940. They spent their evenings discussing racial ideology and Mein Kampf, their shared interests and admiration for Hitler lending an intense meaning to the relationship. Savitri Devi was introduced to Subhas Chandra Bose, the Hindu nationalist who formed the pro-German Indian National Army. The Wehrmacht had been training Indian POWs in Germany and an Indian Legion was formed with Bose addressing them with, "Hitler is your friend, a friend of the Aryans, and you will march to India as your Motherland's liberators". The swastika under the eagle on the right breast was not unfamiliar to them. Aryanism was universal.

BOOK REVIEW

HER LIFE AND MISSION.

In the post-war years, Savitri Devi concentrated on her writings back in Europe. Her best work, The Lightning and the Sun, was a synthesis of National Socialism and "the legacy of immemorial Aryan tradition" at the heart of Hinduism. The cyclic view of history implicit in Hinduism has an obvious parallel with Oswald Spengler. Adolf Hitler is identified in this Hindu world-view as an avatar, an incarnation of a god, and Savitri Devi places Hitler as the "western Aryan counterpart of Rama and Krishna among the eastern Aryans of India". Goodrick-Clark points out that certain passages in Mein Kampf allude to this universalised mysticism with references to the "planets", the "world ether", "millions of years", "all creation" and so on. When the war was coming to a close, Savitri Devi saw Hitler as the incarnation at the moment of the final Armageddon and his sacrifice served as a fulfillment of the highest purpose of creation.

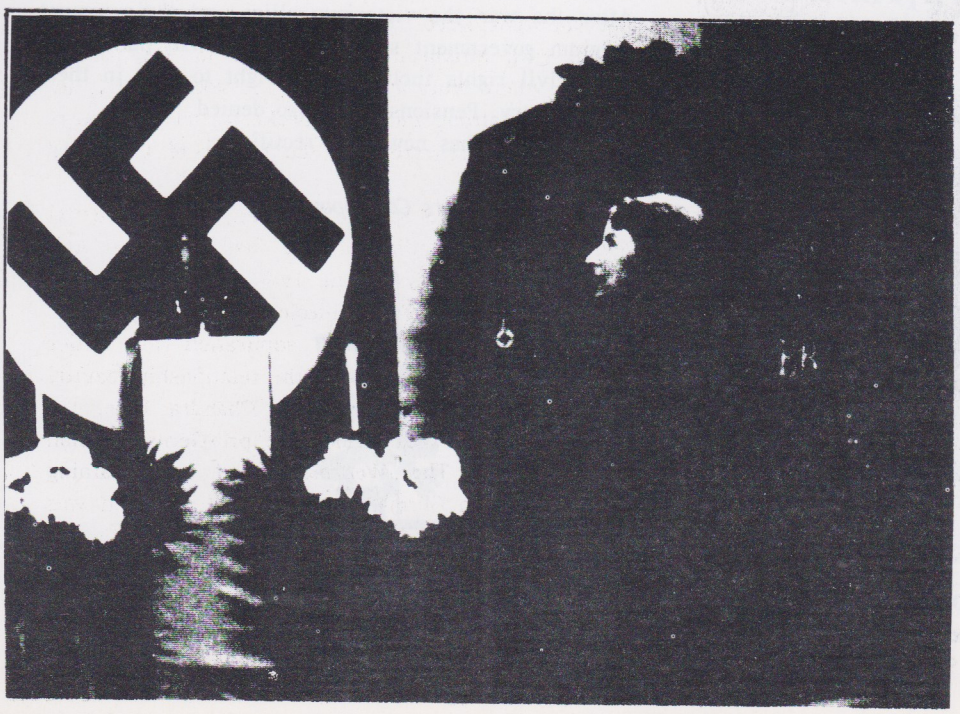

In the spring of 1948, she entered occupied Germany where she made many friends through her sympathy for the defeated Germans. She distributed leaflets at great personal risk from the the occupation forces until she was eventually arrested for promoting National Socialist ideas, the maximum penalty being the death sentence. She served six months of a three years sentence. This was her initiation into the post-war National Socialist world.

What one chapter describes as her "pilgrimage", recounts her visits to the Obersalzberg, Landsberg prison, Nürnberg and the Feldherrnhalle in München. It was another spiritual journey and along the way she would consolidate long-lasting friendships with men like Hans-Ulrich Rudel, the only holder of the Iron Cross with Gold Oakleaves, Swords and Diamonds.

In her later years she moved back to India with her husband after decades of selfless devotion to the National Socialist cause. She continued her writings, corresponding with Colin Jordan, Matt Koehl and Ernst Zundel. Her ideas on a mystical National Socialism were recieved with extreme favour, concentrating on the occult and ecological issues. In 1979, Zundel republished The Lightning and the Sun and, in the preface, he wrote, "The name, Savitri Devi, will be remembered in white history as one of the truly great names of our race, when our history is once again written by white historians".

Her ashes, in an urn, are placed in the American Nazi Party shrine in Arlington next to George Lincoln Rockwell.

Swiss Expose Holocaust Survivor's Lies

The Swiss writer and journalist, Daniel Ganzfried, has exposed Holocaust "survivor", Binjamin Wilkomirski, as a fraud and a liar, in an article in a major Swiss weekly magazine.

Wilkomirski, who claims he is a survivor of Riga, Majdanek and Auschwitz labour camps, wrote a book, Fragments, which, he claimed, detailed his Holocaust experiences as a young man. The book was widely acclaimed in the United States and was extravagantly praised by the influential, but pro-Zionist, New York Times.

In the book, Wilkomirski claims he remembered graphic details of the death of his father in the Riga camp and described scenes of the horror around him. But following an investigation by Daniel Ganzfried, aided by the Swiss authorities, it has been revealed that Wilkomirski was born illegitimately in 1941 and spent his childhood not in German labour camps, but being educated in a Swiss school and cared for by his adopted parents!

Such has been the thoroughness of Mr Ganzfried's investigation that a representative of Switzerland's Jewish community commented that "fake Holocaust testimony was harmful and distorts debate on the subject".

Flemish Patriots Get Justice At Last

Left-wing activists and former members of the resistance are furious over a government decision to pay special pensions to Flemish patriots who fought against communism with the German forces during the last war.

The payments, of around £350 a yea,r have been paid to all Belgians classed as "victims of the war" for many years but until the new legislation was changed Flemish patriots had been excluded.

The change was initiated by a coalition of Flemish nationalist parties including the Christian-Social, CVP party, Volksunie, and Vlaams Blok.

Footnote: During the last war over 100,000 Flemings fought as volunteers in the Waffen SS mainly on the Eastern Front.

Their motive was to protect Flanders from the evils of communism and to promote an independent Flanders within the New European Order.

After the war the victorious allies and their puppet Belgium government stripped the Flemish patriots of their civil rights including the right to vote in their own country. Pensions were also denied.

This injustice has now been rectified.

Israel

Vanunu Appeal Rejected

Israel's "prisoner of peace", Mordechai Vanunu, has had his latest appeal for release from prison refused on the grounds "that his freedom could jeapodise Israel's security". Vanunu has served almost 13 years of an 18 year sentence imposed for alerting the world that Israel was holding a stock of between 100 and 200 atom bombs and was secretly developing a thermonuclear bomb.

Mordechai Vanunu

Vanunu was working as a technician at the top-secret Dimona weapons plant in Israel when he discovered the horrifying secret about Israel's nuclear capability. Following a crisis of conscience, Vanunu flew to Australia to reveal his shattering news. He then flew to London where he was a guest of the Sunday Times newspaper, who produced a full account of Vanunu's revelations.

The Israeli secret service, Mossad, was ordered to stop Vanunu "at all costs". Wary of attacking or murdering Vanunu on British soil because the then Prime Minister, Margaret Thatcher, was regarded as a good friend of Israel who should not be embarrassed, a plot was hatched to lure Vanunu to another, less pro-Israel country. In a classic "honey-trap", Mossad instructed one of their agents, "Cindy" (real name Cheryl Bentov, a US born Israeli citizen) to try and seduce Vanunu and lure him out of Britain. "Cindy" was remarkably successful and persuaded Vanunu to accompany her on a short holiday to Rome.

Vanunu and "Cindy" arrived in Rome on September 30th 1986. This was the last day of freedom for Vanunu. At an apartment in the city's suburbs Vanunu was beaten and drugged by waiting Mossad agents and smuggled aboard an Israeli ship in a wooden crate.

After a brief show trial in Tel Aviv, Vanunu was sentenced to 18 years prison, to be served in solitary confinement!

Despite Vanunu's service to world peace in exposing Israel's nuclear secrets the world has not been grateful. Vanunu has become a forgotten man. No sanctions have been taken against Israel by the free world despite its clear breach of the Nuclear Proliferation Treaty. No sanctions have been imposed for Israel's total disregard of International law by illegally abducting Vanunu from a foreign country.

Britain, the United States and indeed all of the free world stands condemned at their lack of protest over the inhumane treatment of this "prisoner of peace".

Poland

The Polish president, Aleksandaer Kwasniewski, has ordered the removal of dozens of crosses erected outside the site of the wartime Auschwitz labour camp, claiming they were political and therefore unacceptable to "us and our Jewish partners".

The crosses had been erected by a militant Christian group to remember the thousands of Christian prisoners who died of malnutrition and disease at the camp during the war.

Nationalism and the Fake Republic

Native Australians remain divided over the future of an Australia suffering from an influx of Asian and oriental immigrants and whether they should, as a nation, continue to show allegiance to the Queen, or create a republic. This abridged article, first printed earlier this year by the Australian National Action, examines the arguments from a Nationalist perspective.

For Nationalists the only real issue worth discussing has not been canvassed: the question of how Australian Independence can be acquired against the forces of economic and political globalisation which compel inevitably - Australia's Asianisation.

The Internationalist Traitor ... Monarchy.

As much as it might hurt the feelings of the older generation of Australians, and some otherwise patriotic in-organisations such as the Returned Services League and the League of Rights, we must state the truth.

Elizabeth Windsor is an internationalist, a conscious mover in the push to have her subjects "think less of nationalism and more of interdependence" (her words). Her Commonwealth works towards economic globalisation and she has presided over the creation of a multicultural society in Britain which denies cultural identity to the British. Elizabeth Windsor has overseen the increasing authoritarianism of the State which erodes the rights and freedoms of the British as their living standards fall. She is a traitor to her people and could hardly be a friend of ours.

This "institution", we say, cannot be separated from the person. We should not expect anything different from "the family".

It is impossible for Nationalists to listen to the gobbledegook from some patriotic circles which admonishes us to worship this monarchy and believe in "the constitution". We are tired of half-baked bush lawyers telling us that all freedom could be ours if only the Constitution was truly implemented. The Constitution itself is outdated and bankrupt. Let it die! And let the monarchy go with it!

The Fake Internationalist Republic.

The Republic being foisted on the Australian people is not our image of a republic and it will deserve only our hatred and contempt. A trade mark on exports to Asia... an Olympic badge. A sign of multiculturalist maturity. A mark of pride for a traitor class finally able to rule over the masses without even the pretence of a tradition. Such a State would not be worthy of any respect.

It is impossible for Nationalists to stand with the "republican push" as the media dubs it. We cannot see Australia becoming free of the I.M.F. and the United Nations inside the framework of this "republic". If staying within these globalist institutions is a mark of republican independence, we would prefer bowing on both knees before Elizabeth Windsor. One liberal internationalist system is as good as another.

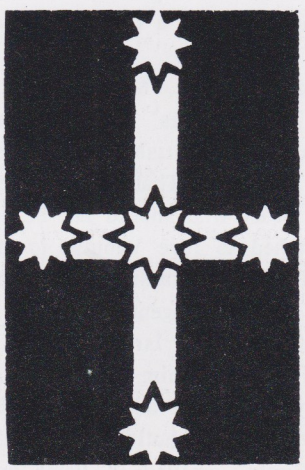

Political Radicalisation.

The death of the British monarchy in Australia will shift the debate amongst patriotic people towards the ground occupied by Nationalists. When there are no more hoary old traditions to cling to, old shibboleths to bow to and restraints upon radical action, we would expect a great flowering of creative militant energy.

It is this energy which Australian Nationalists wish to organise into a fighting movement for Australian Independence.

We understand the conservative patriots find our logic hard to follow. We are not monarchists, yet we stand aloof from the republican debate. We abstain. It is because we do not wish to soil ourselves with any participation - not in the birth of a National State - but in an abortion. Our fight carries on when the historical debris of the past is finally beyond resurrection.

Beneath the Eureka Flag, we will conquer the fake-republic and create the National State!

Führer Theories: Past And Present

Such has been the impact of National Socialism on the twentieth century that it holds an enduring fascination for very many people, most of all for those in the business of selling books. Put a swastika on the cover and it will not fail to catch the eye. There is a genre obsessed with explaining away the period of Hitlerism as if it were a virus that could be detected and identified ... and then dismissed. Rather than acknowledge National Socialism as a valid political philosophy, the trend is to look into the bottomless pit in a desperate attempt to find demons.

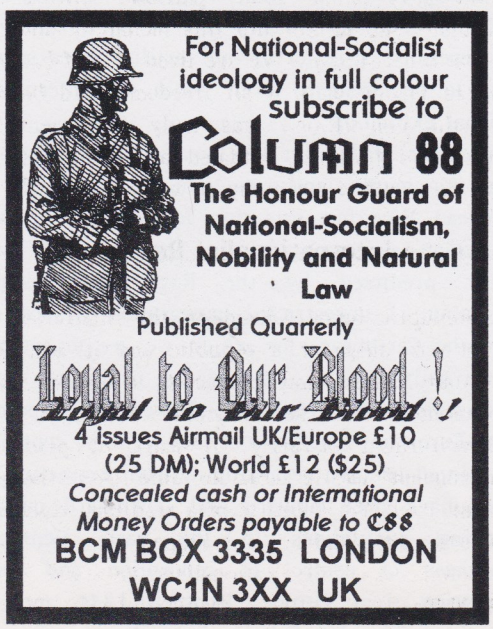

The latest book in this highly competitive field was the publication of Explaining Hitler by Ron Rosenbaum and, with this never-ending stream of literature on the subject of the Fuhrer, it could be dismissed as a form of literary virus in itself. There is a continuing debate about the role of Hitler and National Socialism and the more it persists the murkier become the theories. There have been two schools of thought on the subject. The first concentrates on the history of great men, laying emphasis on the personality. The other delves into personal idiosyncrasies, searching for defects in its preoccupation with pathology. The Marxist approach can be dismissed with its belief that everything is influenced by impersonal forces, that Hitler was merely the puppet of monopoly capitalism out to smash the workers.

One of the first attempts at analysing Hitler's personality was carried out in 1943 by the US Office of Strategic Services (OSS). This research was unique in that Hitler was still alive and there was some attempt at avoiding the crudity and immorality of First World War propaganda. As an attempt at "psycho-historical reconstruction", the purpose behind this OSS research was to attempt to foretell Hitler's next moves during wartime. What effect this research had on the war policy of the Allies has never been evaluated.

Most posthumous biographies today are spiced up with details of the subjects' sex lives ... the quirkier, the better. This is intended to explain the genius of the artist as being beyond the norm. Indeed, sexual perversion seems to be an obligatory prerequisite for being "extraordinary". The pseudo-science of psycho-analysis, invented by Viennese Jewish charlatans, with its morbid emphasis on infantile sexuality, reduces everything to the use and abuse of the genital region.

In Explaining Hitler, Rosenbaum reverts to Freudian "playing with turds", with the old myth of Hitler's single testicle and the alleged incestuous relationship with his niece Geli Raubel ... of the perverted sort, of course. The sub-title of his book claims to be "the Search for the Origins of His Evil" but one wonders how on earth is monorchism (only one testicle) equated with a satanic disposition. Equally, his relationship with his niece, however intimate, can not explain his powerful personality. Rosenbaum does a lot of literary cheating by interviewing Lords Bullock and Dacre, along with the "experts" on pathology ... Goldhagen and Lucy Dawidowicz. In Hitler's Willing Executioners, Goldhagen is content with blaming the entire German nation for the Holocaust but Hyam Maccoby blames it all on Christianity. Rosenbaum bravely consults David Irving, who seems to be enjoying a degree of rehabilitation, and an entire chapter is devoted to Irving's views .. a glimmer of light in the murkiness!

Hitler was a unique figure in human history. He was a man of his time who fitted the circumstances. His genius shone through his amazing will. It is as simple as that. As future Führer books pour from the presses offering us more "explanations" we need only acknowledge the visionary power of his Weltanschauung with its eternal truths and unalterable facts.

RACIAL SUICIDE AND THE DECLINE OF THE WEST

Genocidal wars, natural catastrophies, disease, hunger and genetic impurities have all been factors at various times of history threatening the existence of racial communities. They have been involuntary phenonena, whereby humanity has been the victim of external influences and forces, seemingly never ending and constantly challenging the struggle for survival. Today, as we approach the twenty first century, we are seriously confronted with the phenomenon of voluntary suicide ... leading to the extinction of the Europeans themselves.

For decades, the subject of population has been concerned with surplus reproduction; undisciplined breeding being regarded as a major contributory factor to hunger, poverty and global economic problems. The problem was addressed to the Third World, that section of Mankind existing in pre-industrial societies without the benefits of order and expanding material production. We see the results today in Africa and Asia where wars are endemic and government unstable. In our own country, our progress and evolution have been hampered by treacherous policies encouraging miscegenation and cultural effacement as a direct attack upon our European racial identity. The high-birthrate among the non-indigenous groups living among us represents a direct biological threat with scientists prognosticating our eventual extinction in the next century.

The threat of national extinction is not new. The concern over population decline in Britain arose after the heavy casualties in the Second European War with the loss of so much young life. For the first time, a Royal Commission on Population was established to address the problem. Published in 1950, its conclusions revealed curious thinking. Two statements, upon examination, prove contradictory:

"If in future British fertility rates remain below replacement level, as they have been for many years past, the population of Great Britain, unless sustained by immigration, will presently cease to increase and begin to decline ... There can be no question as to the necessity of restoring our fertility rates sooner or later to replacement level, since the alternative is national extinction ...".

Fortunately, Britain in 1950 was experiencing a baby boom far more significant than that after the First European War but this was followed, along with a population explosion in the Third World, with a policy predicted by the Royal Commission on Population ... unrestricted immigration, predominently from the Caribbean, for which we are told we must be eternally grateful. As race and nation are concepts indivisible and irrevocably linked, this policy of extra-European immigration has visibly contradicted the alleged concern regarding national extinction.

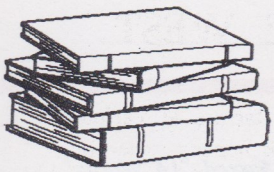

There have been upward and downward curves in changing populations in the past. Depressions, awareness of control of conception and massive emigration from Europe. Between 1846 and 1932, eighteen million left Britain. Even though governments from many countries have concerned themselves with the problems of population, they have been reluctant to do anything about it, apart from China and Singapore. The future, however, looks increasingly Asian in genetic terms. Reproduction is highly energetic in South America and Africa is expected to double in a couple of decades. Asia has a population of over 2,000 million and is increasing rapidly.

In Britain, and I write of our own people, we are experiencing the direct opposite of a population explosion. It is rather a population implosion, not the results of internecine wars, natural disasters or famines, but a determined policy of domestic choice. In short, our own people are exterminating themselves. The population of Western Europe is shrinking in an unprecedented way with a birthrate below that regarded as ensuring genetic stability. It would appear that our own people no longer like children or, at least, have decided to exclude them from their domestic lives. Jean-Claude Chesnais of the Paris-based National Institute for the Study of Demography expresses his alarm when he says, "I think Europe may be in the vanguard of a powerful trend and it is frightening because you can not have a successful world without children in it". As other civilisations have disappeared without trace, so our own European civilisation faces the same prospect. Even with the threat of biological invasions from non-Europeans, our own people are metaphorically pointing a gun to their heads.

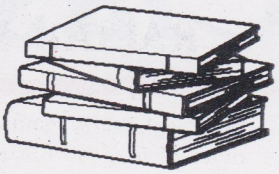

The institution of marriage is out of fashion. In 1996, 36% of births were to unmarried mothers along with increasing divorce rates among the married. As Europeans have fewer babies, the elderly population is increasing with the obvious socio/economic problems that face us in the future. But it is not just a question of economics. The future means children ... the evolution of the genetic pool, the vitality of our race. Our own people have become far too materialistic with children regarded as a burden on their selfish lives. It is a spiritual crisis with the most terrifying repercussions in the future. As other races reproduce at astonishing rates, our own people appear to be surrendering without being conscious of their own choices and actions.

With the dramatic changes in our breeding habits, we are raising a white flag to all the surplus of the Third World, to every parasitic asylum seeker and to every enemy of European civilisation.
